POETRY.

A SEA PIECE.

A holy stillness, beautiful and deep,
Reigns in the air and broods upon the ocean:
The worn-out winds are quieted to sleep,
And not a wave is lifted into motion.
The sea bird skims along the glassy tide
With side-long flight and wing of gleaming whiteness,
Or floats upon the sea-stretching wide
A sheet of gold beneath the noonday's brightness.
The fleecy clouds hang on the deep blue sky,
Into fantastic shapes of beauty moulded;
Reaching above each other, broad and high—
The dazzling sunbeams in their bosoms folded.
It seems as if the burning cheek of day
Were placed upon the ocean's noisless pillow;
And both in harmonizing slumber lay,
Stirred by no cooling breeze or rippling billow.
How, at an hour like this, the dreaming wind
Parades the quiet that is shed around us;
As if the Power that stills the restless wind
With the same soothing influence bound us.

THE CLOSING YEAR.—BY WILLIS.

It is a melancholy task to reckon with the departed year. To trace back the curious threads of affection through its many-colored web, and knot anew its broken places—to number the missing objects of interest, the dead and the neglected—to sum up the broken resolutions, the deferred hopes, the dissolved phantasms of anticipation, and the many wanderings from the leading star of duty—this is indeed a melancholy task, but, withal, a profitable, and, it may sometimes be, a pleasing and a soothing one. It is wonderful in what short compass the objects of this world move. They are like arrows loosed from a bow. A year—a brief year, is full of things divided and finished and forgotten. Nothing keeps evenly on. What is there in the running calendar of the year that has departed, which has kept its place and its magnitude? Here and there an aspirant for fame still stretches after his eluding shadow—here and there and enthusiast still clings to his golden dream—here and there (and alas! how rarely) a friend keeps his truth, and a lover his fervor—but how many more, that were ambitious, as enthusiastic, as loving as these, when this year began, are now sluggish, and cold and false! You may keep a record of life, and as surely as it is human, it will be a fragmented and disjointed history, crowded with unaccountableness and change. There is nothing constant. The links of life are forever breaking, but we rush on still. A fellow traveler drops from our side into the grave—a guiding star of hope vanishes from the sky—a creature of our affections, a child or an idol, is snatched from us—perhaps nothing with which we began the race is left to us, and yet we do not halt. "Onward—still onward" is the eternal cry, and as the past recedes, the broken ties are forgotten, and the present and future occupy us alone.

There are bright chapters in the past, however. If our lot is capricious and broken, it is also new and various. One friend has grown cool, but we have won another. One chance was less fortunate than we expected, but another was better. We have encountered one man's prejudices, but, in so doing, we have unexpectedly flattered the partialities of his neighbor. We have neglected a recorded duty, but a deed of charity done upon impulse has brought up the balance. In an equable temper of mind, memory, to a man of ordinary goodness of heart, is pleasant company. A careless rhymist, whose heart is better than his head, says:

"I would not escape from Memory's land,
For all the eye can see;
For there's a dearer dust in Memory's land,
Than the one of rich Peru.
I clasp the letter by Memory twined,
The weaver's heart and soul to bind."

It was a good thought suggested by an ingenious friend of mine, to make one's life annually, and remember all whom we love in it in the degree of their deservings. I have acted upon the hint since, and truly it is keeping a calendar of one's life. I have little to bequeath, indeed—a manuscript or two, some half dozen pictures, and a score or two of much-thumbed and choice authors—but, slight as these poor mementoes are, it is pleasant to rate their difference, and write against them the names of our friends, as we should wish them left if we knew we were presently to die. It would be a satisfying thought in sickness, that one's friends would have a memorial to suggest us when we were gone—that they would know we wished to be remembered by them, and remembered them among the first. And it is pleasant, too, while alive, to change the order of appropriation with the ever-varying degrees of affection. It is a relief to vexation and mortified pride to erase the name of one unworthy or false, and it is delightful, as another gets nearer to your heart, with the gradual and sure test of intimacy, to polish him in your secret register.

If I should live to be old, I doubt not it will be a pleasant thing to look over these little testaments. It is difficult now, with their kind offices and pleasant faces ever about one, to realize the changes of feeling between the first and the last—more difficult still to imagine, against any of those familiar names the significant asterisk which marks the dead—yet if the common changes of human truth, and the still more desperate chance of human life, continue it is melancholy to think what a miracle it would be if even half this list, brief and youthful as it is, should be, twenty years hence, living and unchanged.

The festivities of this part of the year always seemed to me mistimed and revolting. I know not what colour the reflections of others take, but to me it is simply the feeling of escape—the released breath of fear after a period of suspense and danger. Accident, misery, death, have been about us in their invisible shapes, and while one is tortured with pain, and another reduced to wretchedness, and another struck into the grave beside us, we know not why or how, we are still living and prosperous. It is next to a miracle that we are so. We have been on the edge of chaos continually. Our feet have tottered, our bosoms have been grazed by the thick shafts of disease—had our eyes been spirit-keen we should have danced with fear at our peril. If every tenth sunbeam were a deadly arrow—if the earth were full of invisible abysses—if poisons were sown thickly in the air, life would hardly be more insecure. We can stand upon our threshold and see it. The vigorous are stricken down by an invisible hand—the active and busy suddenly disappear—death is caught in the breath of the night wind, in the dropping of the dew. There is no place or moment in which that horrible phantom is not gliding among us. It is natural at each period of escape to rejoice fervently and from the heart; but I know not, if others look upon death with the same irrepressible horror that I do, how their joy can be so thoughtlessly trifling. It seems to me, matter for deep, and almost fearful congratulation. It should be expressed in religious places and with the solemn voice of worship; and when the period has thus been marked, it should be speedily forgotten lest its cloud become depressing. I am an advocate for all the gaiety that the spirits will bear. I would reserve no particle of the treasure of happiness. The world is dull enough at the best. But do not mistake its temper. Do not press into the service of gay pleasure the thrilling solemnities of life. I think anything which reminds me of death, solemn any time, when our escape from it is thrust irresistibly upon the mind, a solemn time; and such is the season of the new-year. It should be occupied by serious thoughts. It is the time to reckon with one's heart—to renew and form resolutions—to forgive and reconcile and redeem.—N. Y. Mirror.

These Boilers can be placed upright, or laid horizontally; they are particularly adapted to the use of hard coal, and are applicable to all engines now in operation, including Steam Boats. Several are in use at Mr. Alger's Foundry at South Boston. One of the Cheapest boats is provided with them; several others are in use in Boston and the vicinity.

* To go from large matters to small ones, the organ of the Loco Focos and the Abolitionists here, the Reformer, (the principal writer for which was a Reverend Mr Fisk, lately a candidate for the Chaplaincy of the House of Representatives !) was equally incensed, for the same reason, at the Postmaster General.— But this was very natural, for the principal purpose in establishing the Reformer, as evinced by its career, appears to have been to assail the most prominent Democratic men and journals—hence its assaults upon Judge Morton, Amos Kendall, the Washington Globe, Albany Argus, N. Y. Times, N. H. Patriot, Eastern Argus, Lowell Patriot, Essex Banner, &c. &c. The Loros now pretend to be friendly to the Baltimore nominations ; within one year they have openly denounced MARTIN VAN BUREN at one of their public meetings, as an enemy of the people ! and since then, not more than four or five months ago, refused to pass a resolution approving of his nomination, because, as they stated, they had not yet determined to support him.— At the election in November, they deserted the Democratic ticket nominated by the friends of Van Buren and Johnson both in a Legislative and in a State Convention, and ran an Abolition ticket with the name of WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON at the head of their Representative list. And yet these political guerrillas have the impudence to claim the confidence of the friends of VAN BUREN ! Some of the principal supporters of the Reformer have boasted that they never voted for a ticket supported by the friends of the National Administration, and even its present ostensible editor and publisher has not pretended to belong to the party supporting General Jackson a twelve month—and we are by no means certain that he will claim half of that time. It is through the aid of such and similar wretched materials that the Nullifiers and Abolitionists hope to divide and embroil the Democratic party in and out of Congress—already had the cry been sounded that the contention had commenced, and the most disastrous consequences to the Administration were eagerly wished for and anticipated, when the course pursued by the true Representatives of the people in Congress, on Wednesday, 23d ult., laying the whole subject upon the table by a vote of 148 to 62, put an extinguisher upon the blaze they were in hopes would illuminate the country from one extreme to the other. This has faction, treachery and fanaticism been rebuked in the Halls of Legislation, and the schemes of reckless, political and religious hypocrites exposed and defeated for the present.

Mr Leggett, of the New York Evening Post, still remains in a very feeble state of health. An arrangement has been made to place the editorial department of that paper under the charge of another gentleman till his recovery, or the return from Europe of his associate editor, who is shortly expected.

A Mr Thorn, a well known bridge builder in that tion, proposes to construct a bridge across the Ohio er at Louisville for the sum of $350,000, and to take of the capital stock himself.

The opposition are betraying the weakness of their cause by quarrelling among themselves about their candidate for the Presidency. The only qualification they demand is availability, if we may use the word. Principles, character, or fitness are not sought for. The only inquiry made is, can we make him available.

two-thirds of the share, has been made by the Directors, and to complete the capital stock, of one hundred thousand dollars, and that said assessment must be paid at the office of the Treasurer, near the Maverick House, East Boston, on Monday, 23th instant.

WILLIAM FETTYPLACE, Treasurer.
